Reforms To The Mortgage
Deduction
Politico reported on August 4th on the White
House’s “Real Estate Industry Tax Reform” listening session and confirmed that the Trump administration is considering reforms to the Mortgage Interest Deduction – including United for Homes’ proposal to reduce the size of a mortgage eligible for a tax break from the current cap of $1 million.
Lowering the cap on the deduction is key to UfH’s strategy to redirect the savings to support affordable housing development through the National Housing Trust Fund. The article is found at www.polit-

Court Rules Disparate Impact Source-of-Income Discrimination Suit Can Proceed

Source-of-income discrimination and disparate impact were the subjects of a lawsuit filed by the National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA) against the Travelers Insurance Company. NFHA claims the firm violates the Fair Housing Act by discriminating on the basis of race and sex through its policy of denying insurance to apartment owners who rent to households with Housing Choice Vouchers (HCVs). NFHA also asserts Travelers violates the District of Columbia’s Human Rights Act because the firm’s policy discriminates against African Americans and women based on source of income (HCVs), because 92% of HCV households in the District are African American and 81% are female-headed households. The US District Court for the District of Columbia ruled that NFHA has standing to bring the discrimination suit and the Court rejected Travelers’ motion to dismiss the suit, holding that NFHA had succeeded in providing a viable disparate impact claim under the Supreme Court’s Inclusive Communities Project decision.

The District Court noted that NFHA’s claims meet the “robust causality” requirement articulated in Inclusive Communities because NFHA sufficiently alleged that Travelers’ policy disproportionately harms the groups most likely to rely on HCVs, African Americans and women, by limiting their housing choices. The Court also held that NFHA adequately alleged that Travelers’ policy violated the DC Human Rights Act’s prohibitions on housing discrimination based on source of income.

Source-of-income discrimination generally refers to landlords who refuse to rent to a household based on the type (the source) of income they have to pay the rent, such as a HCV, Social Security, Supplemental Security Income (SSI) received by people with disabilities, veterans’ benefits, alimony or child-support payments from a missing spouse, and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF).

For more than 45 years, federal circuit courts had recognized two categories of discrimination prohibited under the Fair Housing Act of 1968: acts that are clearly intentional and acts such as policies and practices that might seem neutral but that have a discriminatory effect. Under the disparate impact standard, courts assess discriminatory effect and whether an action perpetuates segregation, whether the discrimination is justified, and whether less discriminatory alternatives exist for the challenged practice.

Banks Called Out For Supporting Bad Landlords

In an effort to address New York City’s worst landlords, the NYC Public Advocate released on August 15th the names of the 10 banks that have invested the most in the city’s worst housing stock. The Public Advocate maintains the Worst Landlords Watchlist, to hold landlords accountable, demand repairs to dangerous buildings, and who are forcing tenants out with underhanded or illegal tactics. Identifying the lenders behind these landlords is the next step in holding the landlords accountable.

Public Advocate Letitia James called on these banks to reform their lending practices to protect tenants. “Banks should put their money where their values are, and stop funding the City’s Worst Landlords until they fix unsafe housing conditions. Banks must use their economic leverage to get bad landlords to take responsibility for maintaining basic living conditions in their buildings. We won’t rest until every single tenant has access to safe housing all across New York City.” She called on the banks to modify their practices when making loans to landlords. The reforms she called for include:

- Banks should incorporate a landlord’s presence on the Worst Landlords Watchlist, as well as current violations, hazardous conditions, and findings of harassment when evaluating a property for a loan;
- If a landlord is on the Worst Landlords Watchlist, banks should condition the loan on the removal of Department of Housing Preservation and Development (HPD) and Department of Buildings (DOB) violations, and assess future property revenue only on the current rent roll; and,
- If a landlord is placed on the Worst Landlords Watchlist after receiving a loan, the bank should appoint a liaison to work with the landlord and tenants on a remediation plan that includes monthly inspections. If the landlord defaults on the remediation plan, the bank should foreclose on the property and appoint a receiver.

Hearing Held On Improving/Expanding LIHTC

The Senate Finance Committee held a hearing, “America’s Affordable Housing Crisis: Challenges and Solutions,” on August 1st. The hearing focused on proposals to reform and enhance the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC), including the “Affordable Housing Credit Improvement Act of 2017” (S 548).

The Committee heard testimony from five witnesses: Daniel Garcia-Diaz, US Government Accountability Office (GAO); Grant Whitaker, National Council of State Housing Agencies; Katherine O’Regan, New York University Furman Center For Real Estate and Urban Policy; Kirk McClure, School Of Public Policy and Administration, University of Kansas; and Granger MacDon-ald, National Association of Home Builders.

Committee members expressed their strong bipartisan support for preserving and enhancing LIHTC in any potential tax reform legislation, citing the importance of the tool in the context of America’s housing affordability crisis.

Chair Orrin Hatch, who is an original cosponsor of S 548, pointed to the scale of the affordable housing shortage and urged bipartisan cooperation on a solution. “There seem to remain many households facing cost burdens associated with renting, with perhaps as much as 26 percent of renter households having paid more than half of their incomes in rent in 2015,” Mr. Hatch said. “This is a problem that should be ready for a bipartisan solution.”

Senator Maria Cantwell, who introduced S 548, urged action by Congress. “If we do nothing, the crisis will be exacerbated,” she said.

Members and witnesses also discussed several opportunities to improve LIHTC through reforms that help the program produce and preserve units more deeply targeted to people with extremely low incomes, reduce barriers to affordable housing development in high-cost “high opportunity” neighborhoods, and enhance federal oversight. As Dr. McClure noted, the LIHTC program would make even greater impact if it could produce more units affordable to households with extremely low incomes, whose needs are the greatest. S 548 makes improvements to LIHTC to achieve that.

Several Committee members praised the program’s design, which localizes decision-making and attracts private capital to affordable housing production. “One reason I support the Low Income Housing Tax Credit program is it allows decisions on affordable housing to be made in the communities where the housing is needed while involving the private sector,” stated Chair Hatch. Senator Johnny Isakson agreed. “I’m a big supporter of this program, and of Ms. Cantwell’s bill,” he said. “If we don’t do it, I can’t think of any other way to get private capital flowing to generate the housing necessary to house the American people.”

Members and witnesses discussed the state-level compliance standards to which developers and investors must adhere in order to receive their LIHTC allocations.

In his testimony, Mr. Garcia-Diaz discussed a number of the GAO’s concerns regarding federal oversight of the program. Citing GAO findings that noncompliance reporting by state housing finance agencies was inconsistent in their frequency and detail and that the IRS did little to follow up on noncompliance reporting, Mr. Garcia-Diaz highlighted several ways to strengthen IRS oversight of the program. These included clarifying reporting requirements, improving tracking of properties placed in service, and using HUD as a resource to augment IRS’s monitoring and data collection capacity. “We believe that investing in oversight and accountability will help ensure that agencies meet program requirements, use federal resources effectively, and ultimately achieve the nation’s goal of providing poor and vulnerable families safe, decent, and affordable housing, which is so desperately needed today,” he said.

Several Committee members also discussed the connection between LIHTC’s efficacy and the availability of Congressionally-appropriated resources for rental assistance and affordable housing production. Senator Bob Menendez stated that President Trump’s FY18 budget request, which proposes to slash federal rental assistance and community development programs, “would turn this affordable housing crisis into an epidemic.” Ms. Cantwell rejected the false choice between investing in affordable housing and fiscal discipline. “Doing nothing doesn’t save us any money,” she said. Dr. O’Regan agreed, citing research demonstrating how the lack of affordable housing shows up in other budgets in the form of higher health and criminal justice system costs. Dr. O’Regan also stressed that LIHTC alone is not enough to create units affordable to very low income families, and that there is a large overlap between LIHTC units and federal rental assistance programs targeted to very low income households. “Forty-seven percent of LIHTC units use some form of rental assistance,” she said.

S 548 and companion legislation in the House could advance either on their own or as part of tax reform legislation in the 115th Congress. Voicing his support for the program and S 548, Senator Sherrod Brown suggested it should be advanced with or without progress on tax reform. “LIHTC is critical,” he said. “It should be protected and expanded whether tax reform occurs in a bipartisan way or proceeds as a Republican fantasy.”

Assemblyman Farrell To Retire

Assembly Herman “Denny” Farrell, chair of the Ways and Means Committee, will retire effective September 5th. Chairman Farrell will be remembered as one of the original founders of the Neighborhood and Rural Preservation Companies in the late 1970’s. September 5th will mark the 51st anniversary of his first job in state government, working for the Supreme Court in Manhattan. He has represented the 71st Assembly District for 41 years.

Chairman Farrell has been a faithful witness each February or March to pleas for increased funding for the RPC program and state investment in capital funding programs.

During the annual budget hearings, he has been a constant on the dais, while advocates have made impassioned requests for project funding to meet the housing needs of New York’s less-fortunate.

“It is taking this step for a number of reasons, including the desire to spend more time with my family and to deal with some issues concerning my health,” said Farrell, 85. “It also will give my Democratic colleagues the opportunity to name a new Chair of the Ways and Means Committee so the work of the committee can proceed without disruption on next year’s budget and other priorities as it always has soon after November’s election.”

Housing Alliance For Developmentally Disabled Residents

The New York State Association of Community and Residential Agencies (NYSACRA) was awarded a Balancing Incentive Program grant to promote and enhance individual housing options for people with Developmental Disabilities. In 2015 NYSACRA published the Report to the Housing Task Force. In order to continue with the momentum from that effort, NYSACRA is pleased to sponsor Alliance meetings to partner with developers, lenders, government stakeholders, provider agencies and people receiving support and their families to create more independent housing options for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

The upstate meeting will be in Albany on September 19th, at 240 Washington Avenue Extension, Suite 501. RSVP to Carol Napierski at Caroln@nysacra.org, or for further information. Additional meetings will be held in Westchester County on September 6th and in New York City on September 12th. Contact NYSACRA for times and locations.
The implementation date when USDA Guaranteed Loan Servicers are required use of the new electronic status reporting enhancements will be delayed by three months from April 1, 2018 to July 1, 2018.

USDA Rural Development (RD) will adopt enhanced Electronic Status Reporting (ESR) on July 1, 2018. At that time, all loan servicers are required to report for the period ending June 30, 2018 using the new Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) format or by using the web screens on USDALINC (https://usdalinc.sc.egov.usda.gov/RHShome.do).

Below are the new business reporting requirements:
1. Monthly default status reporting will be enhanced to add additional data fields and default status codes. The current EDI Transaction Set 264 will continue to be used but will require many new data fields. The new default reporting structure will be similar to that of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA).
2. Quarterly status reporting will change in frequency from quarterly reporting to monthly reporting. The EDI Transaction set 203 will continue to be used and will not change in structure. However, the statuses of all loans will now be required on a monthly basis.
3. Loan servicers will now be required to perform corrections of their status reports, similar to what is required by FHA.

For loan servicers with a small USDA Rural Development portfolio, the web screen method of reporting will still be available in lieu of the EDI transaction sets.
