Rebuild Rural America Act Introduced
“National Success Requires Rural America’s Success”

Senator Kirsten Gillibrand has introduced legislation to address the revitalization needs of communities across the country. S 2704, The Rebuild Rural America Act was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry on October 24th, so it is entirely possible that it has escaped notice of those involved in affordable housing and community development. The legislation is cosponsored by Sens. Tina Smith and Richard Durban. Matching legislation has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Antonio Delgado of the 19th Congressional District.

The legislation provides for a $50 billion Rural Future Partnership Fund through the USDA to provide noncompetitive flexible block grants to rural regions that struggle to secure federal grants currently. The program is based on regional consensus about priorities and is based on the recognition that rural communities do not have equal access to capital or investment to the same degree as urban and suburban communities, resulting in substantially reduced economic activity, as well as overall reduced levels of opportunity.

Once certified for eligibility for the program, rural regions can qualify for commitments of 5 years of renewable funding to support progress on the region’s locally developed goals and objectives. Eligible uses of the funds include comprehensive planning work; Main Street revitalization and critical infrastructure; entrepreneurship; public services such as day care centers; skills training and job placement; and bridging the rural/urban divide around issues such as clean energy use, workforce readiness, and local and healthy food systems development.

Suddenly- Media Coverage

In recent days, there seems to have been a flurry of media coverage of housing and rural issues. For months, the National Low Income Housing Coalition campaigned to get a question- just one question- on housing affordability inserted into the Democratic Presidential Campaign debates, and that wish finally came true on November 20th at the debate in Atlanta. Moderator Kristen Welker asked Tom Steyer and Senator Warren about the issue. Senator Booker described his plan for a tax credit for those who pay more than a third of their income in rent. He noted that gentrification forces low income people further out of their communities, often compounding racial segregation. Both Warren and Steyer noted that the cause of the housing affordability crunch is on the supply side- more units are needed. Warren also noted that any new housing plan must address redlining. The debate transcript is found at www.nbcnews.com/politics/2020-election/read-democratic-debate-transcript-november-20-2019-n1088186.

Alarms Don’t Meet The Test
A campaign has begun to halt the online sale of untested smoke and carbon monoxide alarms. A fairly large selection of these devices are available on Amazon, and relatively few of them have been tested by a third party testing entity, such as Under

HUD-VASH Expansion Eyed

The House Committee on Financial Services passed several bills on November 13th, including HR 2398, which would allow chronically homeless veterans who have received an “other than honorable” (OTH) discharge to participate in the Housing and Urban Development-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) program. Representative Scott Peters introduced the bill, which previously passed out of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, which also has jurisdiction over the proposal. Senators John Tester, Todd Young, and Chris Murphy introduced identical legislation, “Veteran Housing Opportunities and Unemployment Support Extension Act of 2019” (S 2061) in July.

The HUD-VASH program combines a HUD Housing Choice Voucher with VA Medical Center case-management services in order to provide specialized solutions for veterans experiencing homelessness. For veterans to qualify for this voucher, they need to be eligible for VA medical benefits, which automatically excludes many veterans with Other Than Honorable (OTH) discharges. OTH discharges are not punitive and should not be confused with a dishonorable discharge. If passed, HR 2398 could provide permanent supportive-housing assistance for an additional 1,000 chronically homeless veterans.

More about the bill can be found at: https://tinyurl.com/t5lnj9c.

Homebuyer Grants

Over 300 families across the state were assisted by these grants in purchasing their first homes between 2003 and 2018. Awardees are selected by a lottery, and must be working with a Realtor in purchasing their home. Applicants who have completed a first time homebuyer course and submit a completion certificate receive 2 entries into the lottery.

USDA Single Family Public Comment Period Opens

On November 25th, a Proposed Rule was published in the Federal Register seeking comments on proposed changes that would increase program flexibility for USDA single family direct mortgage programs, allow more borrowers to access affordable loans, better align single family housing direct programs with best practices, and enable the programs to be more responsive to economic conditions and trends.

HEAP Program Open

The New York State Office of Temporary and Disability Assistance (OTDA) opened the Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP) on November 12, 2019. HEAP is a federally funded program that assists eligible low-income households in meeting the cost of energy. Eligibility and benefits are based on income, household size, and primary heating source. Eligible New York households may receive one regular HEAP benefit per program year to help pay for home heating. Applications for emergency HEAP benefits will be available on January 2, 2020 for households without fuel or utility service or who are in danger of running out of fuel or having their utility service shut off. Assistance is also available to eligible homeowners for the repair, replacement, or cleaning and tuning of applicant-owned primary heating equipment. The OTDA HEAP webpage at http://otda.ny.gov/programs/heap/ lists information about all HEAP components, as well as eligibility requirements and benefit amounts. Applicants for the Regular benefits may apply online through myBenefits.ny.gov. Questions about the program should be directed to the local county Social Services offices.

Multifamily Application Deadlines Loom

NYS HCR will accept applications for multifamily affordable rental housing through December 15th for regular submissions for projects partially financed with 9% tax credits (early round applications were due on November 15th). The RFP was issued on October 8th, and is found at www.hcr.ny.gov/system/files/documents/2019/10/fall-2019-hcr-multifamily-finance-9-rfp-updated-10.18.19.pdf. Approximately $28 million is available in the current RFP for Low Income Housing Tax Credits, with an additional $3 million of State Tax Credits on the table. HCR staff have been discussing the possibility of having 2 application deadlines per year.

The programs covered by the current RFP are: the Low Income Housing Trust Fund; the Rural and Urban Community Investment Fund; the Supportive Housing Opportunity Program; Public Housing Preservation; the Middle Income Housing Program; the Housing Development Fund; the federal Housing Trust Fund Program; and the Section 8 Project Based Voucher Program. See the RFP at www.hcr.ny.gov/system/files/documents/2019/10/fall-2019-hcr-multifamily-finance-9-rfp-updated-10.18.19.pdf.

National Grid Ends Gas Moratorium

Governor Cuomo announced an agreement with National Grid on November 25th to end a moratorium on natural gas hookups in Nassau and Suffolk Counties, as well as Brooklyn and Queens. In addition to immediately hooking up 1,157 customers that had been pending, the agreement requires National Grid to develop a long term plan for ensuring the availability of energy services to the affected area, with public meetings on the plan over the next three months. The new long term plan is supposed to be in place by June, 2020.

The lack of access to natural gas has impacted a number of affordable housing projects under development, and HCR staff are encouraging project sponsors to propose alternative energy concepts to work around this problem.

In addition, a $36 million penalty has been levied against National Grid. Those funds will be used to support new clean energy and conservation projects.

On November 18th, a North Country symposium was held at St. Lawrence University in Canton, and one of the featured speakers was Ben Winchester of the University of Minnesota. In an interview on North Country Public Radio on November 15th, Mr. Winchester talked about the importance of small towns changing the story about their communities. He discussed the need to recognize economic truths, but not sell your community’s attractiveness short. Small rural communities need to understand the national demographic trends, including an overwhelming preference for living in small towns. He also discussed the concept of brain gainers taking over businesses or markets from retiring owners. He stressed the need to find the hidden newcomers and engaging them, rallying support for community revitalization. He noted that rural America is poised for a dramatic shift due to the aging of the rural population, which is bound to open opportunities for new settlers. Other than a $100,000 award to the Village of Tupper Lake for a facade improvement program, the remaining awards mostly focused on projects that support tourism growth, with many of the grants involving trail system improvements. The largest grant awarded was $100,000. The program is administered by the Department of Environmental Conservation. The original RFP issued in April of this year projected that a total of $1.45 million would be available. An NPR report on the morning of November 25th took the issue of proposals of several Democratic Presidential candidates to forgive massive student debts and pivoted to the impact of this debt load on housing affordability. The proposal by Sens. Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders would eliminate debt up to $50,000 in Warren’s proposal and eliminate all student debt in the Sanders proposal, allowing a lot more people to have kids, or start businesses, or buy houses. Lawrence Yun, the National Association of Realtors chief economist says his group’s surveys show that student debt has people delaying homeownership by five to seven years. See the NPR article at www.npr.org/2019/11/25/782070151/forgiving-student-debt-would-boost-economy.

Senators Ask CFPB To Look Into Fair Lending Enforcement

Sens. Elizabeth Warren and Sherrod Brown are asking the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) for information about its enforcement of fair lending laws in light of reports that women who apply for Goldman Sachs’s Apple Card receive worse terms than men.

The Democratic senators, in a letter addressed to CFPB Director Kathleen Kraninger, asked for a clear breakdown of how the CFPB handles determining whether companies are complying with creditor discrimination laws.

The letter asks about how the bureau handles new lenders or products, specifically whether the CFPB factors in the additional risk for them.

The senators write that they are worried that adjustments to the structure of the bureau under the Trump administration have affected its oversight abilities.

“We’re concerned that this new structure, where many offices have varying degrees of authority, may allow new potentially discriminatory products to get to market without adequate oversight,” the letter said. “Adding to our alarm, under your leadership, the CFPB has shown little willingness to fulfill its statutory mandate to enforce fair lending laws.”

The lawmakers are requesting the bureau answer their questions by Dec. 9th on how it enforces the fair lending laws, whether bureau changes have affected that and whether the Apple Card went through the appropriate scrutiny.

Goldman has been criticized for allegations of gender discrimination in its Apple Card algorithms after several people complained that women were being given lower credit limits than men who had similar credit histories.

The New York State Department of Financial Services announced earlier this month it would investigate Goldman and its new credit card launched this year.

Warren has previously criticized Goldman for its response to the alleged discrimination, saying it should be the responsibility of the company to fix the potential discrimination and pull down the card if they cannot.

Goldman deferred to a previous statement when asked for comment, saying the company does not make decisions for “credit worthiness” based on gender, race, age, sexual orientation and other “legally prohibited factors.”

“For credit decisions we make, we can identify which factors from an individual’s credit bureau issued credit report or stated income contribute to the outcome. We welcome a discussion of this topic with policymakers and regulators,” the company statement from earlier this month said.
